Welcome to Creative Writing.

Since our class is dedicated to storytelling across many genres – short stories, poems, (screen)plays, and essays, read 99 Ways to Tell a Story: Exercises in Style by Matt Madden. This book playfully and brilliantly tells “the same story” in different ways (99 to be exact!), revealing how stories can be shaped and presented in very different ways and how “the medium affects the message.” As you read, think about which stories are most effective, how the tone and mood change, the ways in which the stories themselves change in these different presentations.

A new discovery awaits the reader on every page. Anyone interested in comics or storytelling will learn much about the interaction between format and content through comparison of Madden's many ingenious approaches. -- Publishers Weekly

A breathtaking display of imagination that is often hilarious and literally, gloriously, kaleidoscopic. -- Booklist
